GRIT IS ELEGANT IN THE WHIT

FARM-TO-TABLE CHEF FOCUSES ON STAYING LOCAL

BY KEVIN PIASKOWSKI AND LAETITIA BÉRAUD • PHOTO TODD COOPER

ASHLEY HAWKINS

There's a new kid on the block in Whiteaker's culinary community. Grit is dignified but rough around the edges. And in keeping with Eugene's passion for the slow food movement, Grit will offer an entirely farm-to-table menu that will change weekly if not nightly.

Every night, around the corner from Izakaya Meiji, Grit will offer a four-course dinner for $35. Drinks are extra, and owner Ashley Hawkins intends to offer a wide range of local wines. The menu will also feature 12 additional items ranging from $6-$20 including seasonal salads, a selection of cheeses from local producers and house-made charcuterie. One of Hawkins' favorites is chicken liver confit. The menu will also feature vegetarian and vegan options.

Hawkins is dedicated to good food ethics. "Acknowledging that fewer options can be better, we can eat locally, deliciously and seasonally," she says. Hawkins isn't just any other person looking to cash in on Eugene's booming culinary industry. She spent most of her life in the agriculture business. Her inspiration for cooking is a mishmash of all the places she's been. She grew up on a cattle ranch in Florida. She worked at Horton Road Organic Farm in Blachly for the past few years, where she improvised cooking with whatever the farm produced. It will be through this farm and the Lane County Farmers Market that she will funnel an ever-changing supply of fresh produce and concoct her recipes.

Grit will seat 42 inside and at least another 40 on the patio. The atmosphere is designed to be welcoming and the dishes will be local, organic and taste elegant, she says. As for the venue itself, Grit is the reincarnation of the historic Shamrock House building. Hawkins is working hard to rehabilitate and preserve the landmark. She says that the site will meet full restoration requirements and feature reclaimed wood panels, tables and bar top.

Hawkins has poured an enormous amount of heart and love into reviving the building. Everyone involved in the building and its restoration is a good friend. And the community itself, including neighboring Ninkasi, Meiji and occasional pedestrians, has been supportive of her efforts, she says, making Grit a seamless addition to Whiteaker's cultural renaissance. ■

Grit will open to the public on Friday, Sept. 13, at 1080 W. 3rd. Ave. Hours are 4 to 10 pm Tuesday through Thursday and 4 to 11 pm Friday and Saturday.

BRUNCH AND SEAFOOD, OH MY!

CARMELITA SPATS SURE TO PLEASE
FANS OF SIMPLISTIC VARIETY

BY JORDAN TICHENOR

SARA ELLIS

“No foams, no gels,” says Sara Ellis, self-proclaimed “serial entrepreneur” and owner of the soon-to-open Carmelita Spats. Although the name invokes Mexican seafood (Carmelita is the name of her Chihuahua, and spats refers to mollusks) this is not really representative of the direction of the restaurant. It is more representative of the unique style of this restaurant.

In reality, the only category for the whimsical fare is “what Sara wants for dinner,” she says. “That’s the menu.” Many of the plates will be straightforward: Kobe beef filets, a plate of prosciutto, sautéed green beans and tomato soup round out some of the ideas that fly off the top of Ellis’ head. She ponders putting some of these in a “risotto setting” and wonders aloud whether she can match some Mexican flavors with French cuisine.

If her name seems familiar, you might recognize Ellis from her previous endeavors, Red Agave and Fandango, among others. This is in addition to her career as a private chef in Mexico. But while the pay was good, the environment wasn’t right. “I miss that social feel from a restaurant,” she says. “I just enjoy it.”

Depending on the day and time of day, you may only be able to choose between three plates. “They’ll change, and I’ll offer like a vegetarian, a pescatarian and a meat option,” Ellis says, pondering the idea. “Yeah, it’ll be easier that way.” That will be the lunch menu, which will be available Wednesday through Friday.

Between Wednesday and Saturday, later in the day, the menu will be “tapas” style, with many plates of varying sizes and styles of food. It will be all about choice. “I sit down at restaurants and I pick everything apart,” Ellis says. “I want a place where people can get exactly what they want.”

Tapas, which are offerings of many small-to-medium-sized plates, are a staple in the European market, but in America the concept has not quite taken off. Perhaps it is because most restaurants are looking to expand, when in reality tapas only work “in a small place,” as Ellis noted after a recent trip to Paris to research food for the restaurant.

Saturday and Sunday will offer “hangover” brunch — “I love a good brunch,” Ellis says.

The restaurant is small. Having taken over the space that used to house Not Your Mama’s Sandwich Shop, it is definitely down the scale from some of Ellis’ grand endeavors. However, she wears her excitement on her face as she walks around the very unfinished dining area. In her mind everything is laid out, but she is still tinkering with it. “It’s going to be very colorful,” she says. “It needs lots of lush tones.”

Ellis’ passion for her food is more than infectious. It’s impossible to not be caught up in her descriptions of the food she sees in her head; her words are full of activity. “It’s going to be a blast of whatever I like to eat.” ■

Carmelita Spats is scheduled to open at 150 Shelton McMurphey Blvd. on Sept. 15.

MOTHER AND SON TEAM UP
TO BRING AUTHENTIC KOREAN COMFORT FOOD TO EUGENE
BY LAUREN MESSMAN • PHOTOS TODD COOPER & TRASK BEDORTHA

The biggest mistake one could make when eating at downtown Eugene’s Noodle Bowl is to order a noodle bowl. It’s a delicious dish but a safe Americanized choice as EW’s Best of Eugene Korean gem. “When the people come, if they want to try Korean food, I want them to ask the servers and get a recommendation rather than just getting a noodle bowl,” says Jae Lee, server and son of owner Sue Lee.

In 1999 the Lees moved from Seoul, South Korea, to Eugene, and Sue Lee decided to open a restaurant out of love for traditional Korean cuisine and to teach her son how to run a small business. Her philosophy: serve good, honest food and create a unique dining experience for Eugeneans. “It’s definitely out of their comfort zone, but eventually I want it to become their comfort food,” Jae Lee says.

Contrary to what Americans generally define as comfort food, the Korean take is low in saturated fat and extremely nutritious, not to mention flavorful. In an attempt to enhance the dining experience, laminated sheets line each of the booths and explain the health benefits of two Korean staples: dwenjang, a traditional fermented soy bean paste used in soups, and kimchi, a side dish made from cabbage and fermented chili peppers. The restaurant prides itself on making both dishes from scratch, which Jae says is rare for most Korean restaurants due to the tedious fermentation process that demands at least four to five workers. In addition to providing authentic kimchi and dwenjang, the restaurant is constantly boiling beef short rib to ensure a rich, savory flavor in all its beef-based soups.

The attention to detail shows in Noodle Bowl’s wide array of soups, rice bowls and meat entrées. Most meals come with traditional side dishes of cool beans, two kinds of kimchi, tofu, potatoes and seaweed salad that act as appetizers or add-ons to the meal. The bibimbap, a traditional rice dish with mixed vegetables and a fried egg, provides the perfect crispy, gooey, spicy and savory combination in a single bite. The distinct sour and spiced taste of authentic kimchi is amplified in the flavorful, well-seasoned kimchi jigae, or kimchi soup made with tofu, pork and garlic.

Whether it’s educating about kimchi, encouraging family-style eating or providing recommendations, this mother-and-son team finds happiness in sharing their definition of comfort food with others. “It’s kind of cool if I see other people coming in and just being mind blown by the food,” Jae Lee says. “For me it’s always been around. It’s like the same as hamburger and pizza, you know what I mean?” ■

Noodle Bowl is open 11:30 am to 9 pm Monday through Saturday at 860 Pearl St., 686-1114.

nly a year and a half after opening Falling Sky Brewing's pub, co-owners Rob Cohen and Jason Carriere didn't expect to open a second location. But when they found the place at 790 Blair Blvd., they fell in love with it.

Pour House & Delicatessen opened in July, welcoming young and old alike in a new brewpub-deli inspired by East Coast Jewish delicatessens, adding to the Falling Sky family, which already included the 13th Avenue fermentation shop and the Oak Alley pub. "We think of them as cousins," Cohen says. "They are related in some ways, aesthetically and in the experience, but this is a Northwest contemporary delicatessen." Cohen is particularly proud of the long wooden tables; almost all of them were made out of the same 100-foot-long tree, a process that took three months.

If the two locations look alike, the menus differ greatly. By "Northwest delicatessen," Cohen means a deli inspired by East Coast Jewish delicatessens but with Northwest ingredients. Chef Corey Wisun pitched the idea to Cohen and Carriere. "I am not trying to do traditional East Coast Jewish food," says Wisun, who was raised in a Jewish household in South Florida. "I'm taking the dishes that I grew up on, and I'm putting a spin on it. I'm modernizing it using quality local ingredients."

Everything they do is from scratch. Take the most popular dish so far: the pastrami sandwich. They cure the meat themselves to obtain a unique smoked pastrami. They bake their own bread in a 60-year-old Swedish oven they discovered on eBay and even prepare their own mustard for this high-quality sandwich. The smell of smoked meat sometimes escapes the open space kitchen. You can see your dish being prepared from your table or from the street.

In a different style, Wisun recommends the pickled albacore loin with parsley fennel salad, a light, summery and very tasty dish. The chicken liver mousse with fig sauce is also among his favorites.

"It's kind of a mishmash of Jewish influence from the world," he says. A lot of the East Coast deli food is of Eastern European origin, but Wisun is also trying to fuse that with some Sephardic Jewish influences from Morocco, Spain, Tunisia and the Middle East.

All ingredients are local and sustainably raised, and the menu will change seasonally. For the upcoming fall, Wisun says they will turn to fall fruits, root vegetables and, for proteins, ducks and rabbits. And if you have a sweet tooth, Pour House is not to be outdone. Its Jewish pastries, such as the rugalech, a pâte brisée with seasonal jam that looks like a little croissant, is delicious.

Like Falling Sky, the deli offers a variety of beers. "Something for everybody's palate," says co-owner Carriere, who has been running Falling Sky's homebrew shop for more than 10 years. With 15 beers on the menu, beyond the popular IPA beers, Carriere says they also offer more traditional English-style beers like bitter, lager and session beers. Their selection of wine is also local and the bar consists of exclusively West Coast liquors.

The last novelty at the deli: house-made and Italian-style sodas with syrup and sparkling water that they also use for cocktails. Between that, the English beers from Falling Sky Breweing and the new spin on Jewish food, unique flavors are guaranteed at what Cohen is proud to call the very first "deli-brewery" in the country. ■

The Falling Sky Pour House & Delicatessen is open 11 am to midnight Sunday through Wednesday and 11 am to 1 am Thursday through Saturday at 790 Blair Blvd., 653-9167, fallingskybrewing.com/deli.

SO MUCH MORE THAN BACON

BACON NATION IS THE BACKLASH AGAINST THE BACKLASH AGAINST BACON

BY NICK POUST • PHOTOS TRASK BEDORTHA & TODD COOPER

For eight years, Bret Ford exchanged his chef's hat for gardening equipment, but he recently had the desire to get back into the cooking world. The former chef at Ambrosia, among other restaurants throughout Oregon, wasn't looking to go back to the same environment, however. More than 20 years after his wife's grandfather suggested running a restaurant on wheels, he and his wife took it to heart. And that's how Bacon Nation began — a place that serves much more than what its name suggests.

"We lost Grandpa about a year ago, and that's just about the time I had an epiphany," he says. "I just decided to do something different and got a fire going under my backside. We call the truck 'George' because George kind of manifested the idea."

Upon finding "George," a 30-foot-long 1985 Chevrolet P30 step van, everything else fell into place. Ford's work at Ambrosia, an overall love for food and an experimental mentality influenced how he orchestrated his own restaurant and created its menu.

"You eat with your eyes first," he says. "Though I'm not classically trained in the CIA, the Culinary Institute of America, I learned from the 'school of hard knocks.' I just inserted myself into the best restaurants in the area when I moved here in '89 that I could find." Ford settled on naming the business after bacon because of its aroma. "Everyone has a memory of bacon cooking for breakfast or camping," he says.

In addition to his restaurant experience, the knowledge he acquires from eating out, watching the Food Network and midnight brainstorm sessions is exemplary in what the Omaha, Neb., native serves. As he says, it's "not just a cheeseburger with some bacon on it." There are sandwiches featuring everything from pork loin to smoked chicken to, yes, bacon-wrapped hot dogs, with sauces such as bacon pesto aioli and their BBQ sauce that is done "the real Kansas City BBQ way," without ketchup, and takes an entire day to make.

After diving into a unique and eclectic entrée, it's time for some chocolate bacon. If it sounds weird, that's because it is, but that doesn't mean it isn't delicious or popular.

"Chocolate bacon? Eww, that sounds gross," Ford says. "One person buys it and carries it away and you watch the wake of people looking at it — they turn around and come up and ask, 'What did that person have? Chocolate bacon? I'll take one of those.'"

Ford occasionally gets his chocolate from Euphoria, ingredients for entrées from Cash and Carry, cheese from Central Point, pork from Carlton Farms and chicken from Draper Farms. The result: gourmet, mouth-watering and flavorful dishes clearly made by someone who knows what he's doing.

"We try to buy the most top-shelf ingredients as we can," he says. "We don't buy anything pre-made. We make everything."

A lot goes into running his mobile restaurant, but he is as invested in continued success as he is in quality of food.

"I set the bar very high," he says. "After three months of doing this, I need to set the bar high. It's fun, it's challenging and it's rewarding, too." ■

Bacon Nation frequents breweries and vineyards around Eugene, including Ninkasi, Viking Braggot Company and LaVelle Vineyards, and it is located at Tom's Market on E. 19th and Agate twice a week. For more information, visit: baconnation.co/Home.html.

There are a lot of businesses around Eugene that claim to have “The Best Reuben in Town.” The sandwich itself is iconic across the country: Rye bread loaded with either pastrami or corned beef, topped with sauerkraut and either Thousand Island dressing or Russian dressing. We decided that it would be fitting to find out who, if anyone, deserved the title for “the best.” Many Reubens were eaten. Lengthy discussions were held. Criteria changed and evolved to account for creativity and tradition. And through it all, only one thing ultimately was made clear: The best Reuben sandwich tends to be, without fail in this town, the Reuben sandwich you are currently eating. Below are descriptions of some of the sandwiches we sampled. We suggest getting out there and having a little Reuben off of your own. You won’t be disappointed.

THE NOBLE CAFE & ESPRESSO, known mostly for being a coffeehouse that makes its own syrups, brought a surprise Reuben to the table. This is a sandwich that is stacked thick on hearty, dense bread, which is an ideal pairing with the nicely smoked meat. This Reuben may have been the epitome of balance between pastrami, sauerkraut, cheese and dressing. When someone seeks a New York Reuben, you can bet they’re seeking Noble.

THE CANNERY’s Reuben is all about the bread, rye crusted with Parmesan and fennel before grilling. This makes their sandwich different than the rest and adds an extra layer of complementary flavors while also providing the perfect stacking platform for a spot-on mix of pastrami and sauerkraut. The Cannery also opts for a more traditional Russian dressing as the sauce, which gives the whole thing more of a tangy finish than the Thousand Island Reubens you may be used to.

EIRINN’S BISTRO knows Reubens. It says right in the ads that Eirinn’s offers “the best.” We have to admit, going in, we were a bit skeptical going into the eatery, which is based in a strip mall. The bistro offers its sandwich with corned beef or pastrami, or (if you’re feeling crazy) a combo of the two. The meat was sliced beautifully and stacked high. There was a delicious amount of sauerkraut and Thousand Island. It would do the whole place a disservice to not mention the amazingness of the homemade potato chips.

EMERALD COUNTRY SMOKED MEATS has an entire windowpane of the shop devoted to their “Best Reuben in Town” claim. This is one of the most traditional Reubens we came across. The pastrami was nearly perfect: thinly sliced, smoky and flavorful. Piled high, the meat made the rest of the sandwich take a back seat, but the bread was nicely toasted (and generously buttered), and the sauerkraut and Thousand Island were loaded on generously.

FALLING SKY POUR HOUSE & DELICATESSEN offers a Reuben with either corned beef or pastrami, both house cured, both delicious. If you have to pick, go with the corned beef. Both meats are smoked to perfection, with incredible flavor, but the corned beef has a buttery quality that takes it to the next level. As if the meat weren’t enough, the house-baked marble rye is not only delicious, it is also a work of art. Pour House has the meat-to-sauerkraut ratio dialed, not over-sauced, so you don’t end up with the majority of the sandwich down your arm or a serious case of collapsed bread.

LAVENDER VANILLA SCONE

FROM DIVINE CUPCAKE

Divine Cupcake's 11th Avenue café location has closed, but it's still doing events and has a full roster of festivals and weddings lined up for the remainder of the year. Owner Thaddeus Moore chose this scone recipe because of the abundance of locally grown, organic lavender. The website allows for ordering from any web-enabled device, and Divine Cupcake has many options for baked goods in addition to cupcakes. "We have scones, muffins, cookies, cake truffle pops, large and small cakes and even pies," Moore says. Each delicious morsel is free of dairy and eggs. Cupcakes can be made to be free of gluten or wheat, soy and nuts. He says they're looking forward to their roster of fall weddings. "We love to cater events," he says. "Being a part of people's celebrations and life-changing events is a magical gift." — Vanessa Salvia

WET INGREDIENTS:

1 1/3 cups soymilk

2 tsp vanilla extract

1/2 cups Earth Balance (plant-based, vegan baking fat)

DRY INGREDIENTS:

3 1/2 cups flour

1/2 cups sugar

2 tbsp baking powder

2 tbsp lavender

GLAZE:

1 tsp vanilla extract

1/2 cup melted Earth Balance

Enough powdered sugar to make a thick glaze

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Whisk together dry ingredients in a bowl, omitting lavender. Add Earth Balance and cut with pastry cutter until the mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in lavender. Stir in vanilla and milk until you have a soft dough.

Roll dough into circle about 1/2-inch tall. Cut dough into eight wedges. Place cut scones onto a parchment covered baking sheet. Bake for 15 minutes.

In a bowl combine melted Earth Balance and vanilla, stir in enough powdered sugar to make a thick glaze. While hot, drizzle the scones with glaze.

PAN-FRIED STEELHEAD

FROM PLANK TOWN BREWING COMPANY

With all of the new breweries and restaurants in Eugene, it might be easy to forget that there are exciting restaurants and breweries in Springfield, too. Plank Town Brewing Company has 12 of its own beers made by brewer Steve van Rossem and familiar dishes like Caesar salad and burgers and fries. But everything is offered with a twist that sets it just a touch above. The grilled Caesar salad is served with polenta croutons. The burgers come with hand-cut fries with homemade ketchup, garlic and herbs, or, for more of a meal, pulled pork and Irish cheese sauce. A decadent topping of asparagus and bacon accompanies the mac and cheese. And try the stuffed burger with the andouille sausage and manchego cheese on the inside.

"Everything is done by hand and comes from local ingredients," says manager and head chef Andy Steinmeyer. "Plank Town was Springfield's nickname," Steinmeyer explains. "It used to be so muddy that people would walk on planks." He and the crew wanted a nostalgic feel in both the look and the food. "But it's elevated to the level of the great ingredients," he says. "We wanted to give it a real Northwest, Oregon feel." — Vanessa Salvia

1/2 cup stone-ground polenta from Lonesome Whistle Farms
1 1/2 cup water
1/4 cup garbanzo flour
1/4 cup sorghum flour
2 tbsp potato starch
canola oil for deep frying
1 tbsp diced shallots
1/2 tbsp minced garlic
1/4 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup heavy cream
2 ounces manchego cheese
1/2 cup baby spinach
6 ounces fillet of steelhead, skin on
2 tbsp of olive oil
1 tbsp lemon juice
salt and pepper to taste

Combine water and polenta, season with salt and pepper, and then bring to a boil in a saucepan on medium heat. Stir constantly until water and polenta are fully incorporated and polenta is smooth to taste. Pour cooked polenta into a square pan or mold so it is 1/2- to 1-inch in thickness. Let cool at room temperature, and then chill for at least one hour. Take chilled polenta and cut into two triangles.

Heat canola oil to 350 degrees. Combine garbanzo and sorghum flour with potato starch and season with salt and pepper. Dredge polenta cakes in flour mix and drop in hot canola oil. Deep fry until crispy golden brown — approximately 4 minutes.

While polenta is frying, heat a non-stick pan on medium-high with a tbsp of olive oil and place seasoned steelhead in skin side up. Fry until a nice brown covers the whole side of the fillet, then flip to skin side. Reduce heat to low and add 1 tbsp of both the wine and lemon juice. Cook for approximately 5 minutes until steelhead is cooked through.

In a separate sauté pan heat shallots and garlic in olive oil on high heat until they brown slightly. Deglaze the pan with the remaining wine. Reduce sauce until all wine is nearly gone, and then add heavy cream, turning heat down to medium. When sauce is thickened, take off heat and add manchego cheese and spinach, stirring until spinach is wilted. Season to taste.

Spread spinach cream sauce on the plate and place polenta cakes in the middle. Place pan-fried steelhead on top of cakes and garnish with fresh lemon.

MAC 'N' CHEEZE

FROM GARBANZO GRILL

Garbanzo Grill Chef Jon Terry is technique-driven. There's a good, a better and a best way to do everything, even down to how to open the silken tofu (smack the ascetic block on the table on both sides, so the tofu bits don't stick to the corners of the package). "There are many choices for vegetarian food in Eugene," Terry says, "so I knew that my vegetarian food had to be really, really good." Garbanzo Grill, a food cart located in the Whiteaker at 267 Van Buren, has received excellent reviews, but they've been hampered in recent months with irregular hours that cost them some customers. Now Garbanzo Grill is back! Regular hours in September will be 11:30 am to 2:30 pm daily except for Tuesday and Thursday.

Terry cooks his pasta in a pressure cooker when making this dish at home; it results in a chewier texture, but is not necessary. —
Vanessa Salvia

THE SAUCE:
1 12-ounce package soft silken tofu
(You can use the firm or extra firm, but be aware that those use isolated soy protein added in as a thickener. To get the same rich consistency as the extra-firm silken tofu, simply open the tofu a few hours early or overnight before preparing then pour off the water that will naturally drain out of the tofu. If you forget this step, don't worry, nobody will notice, but when you want it extra rich and creamy, take the time to do this and it makes a very nice difference.)
3 tbsp nutritional yeast flakes
1 tbsp soy sauce
1 tsp rice vinegar
1/4 tsp Dijon mustard
2 dashes Tabasco sauce
1/2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp Sucanat, evaporated cane juice or sugar

Puréd tofu base is versatile and can be used to add rich and creamy, low fat, high protein flavors and textures to a wide variety of foods, savory to sweet. Add flavored dressing packets like powdered ranch dressings or pestos for a quick raw vegetable dipping or hot pasta sauce, or take it in the opposite direction and add vanilla and sweetener for a whipped cream substitute!

Pressure cooker campanelle pasta:
for 1 large serving
1 cup broth
1 cup campanelle pasta (ready in 10 to 12 minutes according to package)

Bring broth to boil before adding pasta, add pasta and cover immediately. You should have just enough liquid to cover the pasta. Bring to pressure over high heat then, when 15 pounds of pressure is achieved and shuttlecock starts hissing, lower temperature to medium and cook for 4 minutes. Run cold water over pressure cooker top to quickly depressurize. When pot is safe, open and stir pasta, adding mac 'n' cheese sauce until desired consistency is reached. Add a ton of freshly ground black pepper and serve HOT.
